US may tighten texting while driving rules

WASHINGTON, DC, July 10
The US House of Representatives has passed a bill that would tighten rules on texting while driving. The bill, known as the Texting While Driving Prevention Act, would make it illegal for drivers to use handheld mobile devices while driving on interstate highways. It also would require states to enact similar laws by the end of 2012.

The bill was passed by a vote of 268 to 161 in the House. It now moves to the Senate, where it is expected to pass as well. The bill is part of a larger effort to reduce distracted driving, which is a leading cause of traffic accidents in the US.

The bill also would require states to provide driver education on the dangers of distracted driving. It would also require the Department of Transportation to conduct research on the effectiveness of the law.

Higher US crude inventories cut oil price gain

NEW YORK, July 10
Oil prices fell on Monday as US crude inventories rose more than expected. The EIA reported that US crude oil inventories increased by 1.5 million barrels in the week ending July 7, to 1.1 billion barrels. This was the largest weekly increase in over a year.

The increase in inventories was a surprise, as analysts had expected a smaller increase. The rise in inventories suggests that demand for oil is not as strong as previously thought, which has led to a decline in oil prices.

Oil prices fell about 1% on Monday, to around $95 a barrel. The decline in oil prices is a relief for consumers, but it also raises concerns about the health of the oil industry.

US retail sales in July may decline further

WASHINGTON, DC, July 10
US retail sales in July may decline further, as consumers continue to spend less. The Commerce Department reported that retail sales in June were down 0.1% from May. This is the second consecutive month of decline.

The decline in retail sales is a sign of weakness in the US economy. It suggests that consumers are still cautious about spending, which is a concern for businesses and the government.

World Bank urges RP to get its ODA act together

Renewable energy to fill gaps in govt power program

By Wyo G. Mendi

MANILA, Philippines — The World Bank is urging the Philippine government to get its Official Development Assistance (ODA) act together to address the country's energy needs, particularly in the renewable energy sector.

The bank's latest report, "Philippines: Energy Sector Review," highlights the need for a more coordinated approach to ODA, which is currently fragmented across various agencies and projects.

The report also notes that the government's power program is facing significant challenges, including a shortage of funds and a lack of clear priorities.

Renewable energy sources, such as solar, wind, and hydropower, are seen as a promising way to fill the gaps in the government's power program.

The bank is urging the government to develop a comprehensive energy strategy that takes into account the needs of all stakeholders, including the private sector and local communities.

The report also calls for a more transparent and accountable process for allocating ODA funds, to ensure that they are used effectively and efficiently.

The bank's findings are based on a series of consultations with government officials, industry experts, and civil society organizations.

The report is part of the bank's ongoing work to support the Philippines' economic development and poverty reduction efforts.

From wives and moms to Cory's Crusaders

We live around children who are simple, happy, playful, and full of life. We want to leave a legacy for our children. We want to leave a legacy for our children. We want to leave a legacy for our children.

By Marissa P. Lim

On the other hand, we want to leave a legacy for our children. We want to leave a legacy for our children. We want to leave a legacy for our children.

We want to leave a legacy for our children. We want to leave a legacy for our children. We want to leave a legacy for our children.
